This course specification provides a summary of the main features of the course, identifies the aims and learning outcomes of the course, the teaching, learning and assessment methods used by teaching staff, and the reference points used to inform the curriculum.

This information is therefore useful to potential students to help them choose the right course of study, to current students on the course and to staff teaching and administering the course.

Further detailed information on the individual modules within the course may be found in the relevant module descriptors and the Course Handbook provided to students on enrolment.

Please refer to the Course and Module Catalogue for further information on the course structure and modules.

Educational aims of the course

- To inspire enthusiasm for the subject areas (English Literature and English Language) and an appreciation of their continuing social, cultural, political and economic importance.
- To understand the role of language and literature in current and different cultures.
- To provide students with the communication, analysis, and research tools that will equip them for a modern, rapidly-changing careers marketplace.
- To provide a framework that fosters wide and varied reading through a broad, diverse, flexible and coherent programme of study in English Language and English Literature across a range of periods and cultural contexts, in a broad and balanced curriculum.
- To enable students to see how linguistic and literary analysis helps us recover the diversity of human organisation and experience in the past and present.
- To promote understanding of the aesthetic and linguistic features of literary and non-literary texts.
- To develop the ability of students for critical evaluation of appropriate theoretical perspectives and methodological approaches, and for the application of such perspectives in their work.
- To enable students to recognise that scholarly knowledge is contingent on the credibility of evidence and interpretation.
- To encourage students to reflect critically upon the acts of reading and writing and the history and modes of textual production.
- To develop the capacity of students to undertake independent research, using appropriate sources and methodologies.
- To equip students with robust tools for empirical analysis of linguistic data sets.
- To encourage students to work collaboratively with peers in pursuit of project work.
- To enable students to develop skills in written and verbal communication across multiple formats, analytical thinking, creative problem-solving, collection and classification of information, interpretation and evaluation.
- To provide students with opportunities to present and communicate information and research in multiple formats through a diverse range of assessment forms.
- To develop a range of subject-specific and generic skills of value in graduate employment, including high-order critical, analytic, research skills, and advanced competence in oral and written communication.
- To equip students with the knowledge and skills to navigate new and evolving digital landscapes.

Course Learning Outcomes and Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategies

The Quality Assurance Agency for Higher Education \(QAA\) sets out a national framework of qualification levels, and the associated standards of achievement are found in their Framework for Higher Education Qualifications document.

Office for Students Conditions of Registration

The Course Learning Outcomes for this course are outlined in the tables below.

A. Knowledge and understanding of:
LO number	Learning outcome	Learning and Teaching methods	Assessment methods
A1	Understand the role and power of written and oral communication in diverse cultural situations.
A2	Develop an awareness of the ways in which texts are produced and shaped across history, through analysis of the principal literary genres and forms of written production across prose, poetry, drama, and non-fiction.
A3	Understand the history, structure, levels, varieties, and discourse functions of the English language.
A4	Comprehend the range of critical contexts, theoretical approaches, and stylistic concepts that can be applied to acts of textual analysis in order to produce meaningful engagements with literary materials.

B. Cognitive (Intellectual or Thinking) skills, able to:

Changes to your course/modules

The University of Portsmouth has checked the information provided in this Course Specification and will endeavour to deliver this course in keeping with this Course Specification. However, changes to the course may sometimes be required arising from annual monitoring, student feedback, and the review and update of modules and courses.

Where this activity leads to significant changes to modules and courses there will be prior consultation with students and others, wherever possible, and the University of Portsmouth will take all reasonable steps to minimise disruption to students.

It is also possible that the University of Portsmouth may not be able to offer a module or course for reasons outside of its control, for example, due to the absence of a member of staff or low student registration numbers. Where this is the case, the University of Portsmouth will endeavour to inform applicants and students as soon as possible, and where appropriate, will facilitate the transfer of affected students to another suitable course.
